

RECEIVER NAMED
GENERAL MANAGER

J. E. Greeley Assumes Charge of Management of The Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Railway Co.

ALSO ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT

New Manager Was One of the Original Promoters of The I. & L. Traction System.

J. E. Greeley, who was appointed receiver for the Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Company, has been elected manager for that road. Since the properties of the company were placed in the hands of Mr. Greeley each month has shown an increase amount of business over the same month of the preceding year, and the net revenue has been larger. In the short time that the new manager has been in charge of the road many improvements have been made and a number of others are contemplated in a short time.

Mr. Greeley was one of the original promoters of the traction line between Seymour and Louisville and is much interested in its success. Before he became receiver and later manager he was an officer of the road, but now that he has direct supervision over the line he will inaugurate many features which will make the system one of the best in the state. The manager has excellent executive ability, and is admirably qualified for his new position.

At the time of the reorganization of the new company, the name of the system was changed to the Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Railway Company and will be known by that name hereafter.

The line was sold at a receiver's sale at Scottsburg on Thursday, March 21, and was purchased by James C. Chapman, of Pittsburg, representing the first mortgage holders. The bid of Mr. Chapman was $750,000 which was the smallest that could be accepted, the court having fixed that amount as the minimum. Under the new organization General Manager Greeley is also vice-president of the company.

During the next ten days or two weeks several changes will probably be made among the other officers of the road.

HEAVY SENTENCE

Irby Eacret Gets One to Eight Years Term in Reformatory.

Irby Eacret, formerly of this city, received a prison sentence of from one to eight years in Indianapolis for the theft of a watch from Michael Wurtz. The latter asserts that he was walking along on the street when Eacret and another boy brushed up against him and relieved him of his property. The police found Eacret and his companion and they were in possession of the timepiece.

Eacret pleaded guilty to the charge which was preferred against him and the judge immediately sentenced him to the Indiana Reformatory. He has been in trouble before and came very nearly landed in the reformatory, but was released upon promise of good behavior.

SLIGHT FROST DAMAGE

Reports Indicate That Injury In Jackson County Will Be Small.

Although there was a heavy, white frost Monday night, which had the appearance of being bent upon doing some damage, the reports from various parts of the county today indicate that the injury to fruit and early crops will be but small. In high lands which were unprotected a slight damage was reported, although it was not thought to be serious. Farmers in the vicinity of Seymour say that there is practically no damage as a result of the heavy frost.

In many parts of the state the damage will be great, and in a few counties the fruit is reported to be entirely killed.

Big Smoke and No Fire Results in Call To Fire Department.

The fire department was called to the home of Thomas Whitson on West Tipton street this morning in answer to a call explaining that there seemed to be a blaze but that difficulty was experienced in locating the exact position of the source of trouble.

The department answered the call in a hurry up run and found the house filled with smoke but could find no blaze. Finally one of the firemen went into the kitchen and found lying upon the stove a smoking dish cloth. This was removed and soon the smoke had cleared away.

PREVENT THE FLY
WILL BE SLOGAN

City Health Department Will Adopt The Starvation Method to Exterminate Insects.

CAMPAIGN BEGINS ABOUT MAY 1

City Ordinance Requiring Closed Garbage Retainers Will Be More Rigidly Enforced.

"Prevent the fly" will be the slogan of the city health board this spring and summer. Instead of following the advice of the murderous slogan "swat the fly" which has been in vogue for several years the local board will go one step farther and will attempt to cause the death of several hundred million flies by starvation by removing their food supply wherever possible. The new slogan came from the Indiana department of health for people who obeyed the former slogan of "swatting" the fly have found it to be tedious past time and were not rewarded for their labor by a noticeable decrease in number.

Believing that the number of flies could be greatly lessened by the removal of their food supplies the city health department will appoint an inspector about the first of next month who will distribute copies of the city ordinance providing that all garbage cans shall be closed. The open garbage can is regarded as a great menace to public health that the spread of various diseases could be prevented if proper precaution was taken. Although the ordinance prohibiting garbage to be kept in open retainers was passed some time ago, it has not been enforced as rigidly as the health department would like, and this year every effort will be made to enforce its provisions.

While there is no city ordinance requiring that refuse from stables be kept from the alleys, the health board is of the opinion that much benefit would result if barns and stables were kept in a more sanitary manner. The department will also ask that each property owner make an especial effort to keep his yard free from trash and rubbish or other refuse which afford the fly a breeding place.

Screens and due attention to the flies that manage to force entry to the house afford protection, but the greatest safeguarding of health in general lies in preventing the pests from breeding. When it is realized that the descendants of a single fly number more than a million during a season it will be readily understood that systematic effort to keep the eggs from hatching can accomplish a great deal. The period of incubation is ten days. Among methods of prevention suggested are the spading of the stable refuse into the ground every day and placing the refuse in pits covered so as to make them inaccessible to flies.

The health department of the city will give the fly question closer attention this summer than ever before, as it is believed that this prevention will result in less disease and make the city more sanitary.

PLACES SELECTED
FOR MAY SESSIONS

Of Registration Boards Which Will Meet in the Various Precincts of The County Next Month.

CLERKS WILL BE NAMED SOON.

Voters Failing to Register at One of the Three Sessions Will Lose Right to Vote in November.

The leaders of both political parties in this county are urging that as many of the voters as possible register at the first session of the registration board which will meet in the different precincts on May 9. Two other opportunities will be given to register, one in September and the last in October, but an especial effort is being made to have the majority of the voters register at the first session.

As this is the first year the registration law has been operative in Jackson county, it is feared that many of the qualified voters will forget that they are required to register and will thus forfeit their votes at the coming election. The law provides that each qualified voter shall register at each session of the board. However, unless proper registration is made no voter will be allowed to cast his vote in November.

The inspectors for the precincts in Jackson county have been appointed and they will select their clerks. Each of the two political parties will have a clerk on the board, and there will also be an inspector at each precinct. The boards will remain in session for only one day unless five voters present a petition in writing before the closing hour of the first day asking that the session continue for a longer period, when the board will not adjourn for three days. The complete list of the clerks for the townships will be selected soon, but ten days are given prior to the time of the session for qualifying.

The places for holding the May session in the ten precincts in this township are as follows:
Jackson Township:

Precinct No. 1, Residence of Nancy White, No. 525 N. Ewing St., Seymour.
Precinct No. 2, at Residence of Walter McGovern, No. 511 East Third St., Seymour.

PHYSICIAN SENT BY JUDGE

Court Wanted To Know If Absent Witnesses Were Ill.

Bloomington, Ind., April 23.—Unusual action was taken in the Newton Adams whitecap trial today, when Judge Mellen issued a bench warrant for Dr. J. E. Lazadder and ordered him to proceed to the homes of three witnesses in an auto and ascertain if their physical condition warranted their excuses that they were too ill to present in court. The witnesses are Mrs. William Moddy, Lizzie Adams and John Butcher.

The defense asked for a change of venue and then after it was granted asked time to prepare written reasons for a continuance. The change was made from Judge James B. Wilson's court to Attorney R. L. Mellen of Bedford, sitting as special judge. About half of the members of the special venire of forty men are from the faculty of Indiana University.

ROCK ISLAND MEN ARRESTED.

Editor and Officials Accused of Inciting Fatal Riots.

Rock Island, Ill., April 23.—Indictments charging assault with intent to murder were served today on E. H. The arrests are a sequel to the recent riots here that resulted in the killing of two and the wounding of nine persons. The three men are held responsible for aiding in bringing about the fatal clash between the police and the mob that attacked the City Hall. There are twenty-six other indictments.

MAY BE TRIED AGAIN

Zachariah Price May Be Required to Stand Second Trial.

Although it has not been definitely decided it is believed that Zachariah Price who was tried at Greensburg for the murder of Fletcher Cook, may be tried the second time. Seba A. Barnes, who conducted the prosecution has received no word from the prosecutor of Jennings county regarding the second trial.

Price is still held at Greensburg, and should he not be permitted to give bond he will be held until the second trial begins. If the case is dismissed such action will be taken soon.

ARBITRATION MAY

Government Suggests Plan When Engineers and Railroad Managers Fail to Agree.

FURTHER TIME IS GRANTED

Engineers Believe Demands Are Just And Invite Consideration By Arbitration Committee.

As many of the railroad men living in this city would be affected by the proposed strike of the engineers, every step taken by the conference committee is watched with great interest. It was rumored here last night that the firemen and trainmen had taken a vote and if a strike is declared they would be in readiness to join the engineers. Many of the trainmen declare that they are looking for a call to strike, while others are of the opinion that a satisfactory agreement can be reached with the government's aid.

New York, April 23.—The offer of mediation from Charles P. Neill, United States labor commissioner, and Judge Martin A. Knapp, of the United States commerce court, which was accepted by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers last night, just after it had declared for a strike as the next move in its campaign for increased wages, came formally by the conference committee of railway managers today.

That the railway managers had decided to accept the eleventh hour proffer of governmental mediation was considered absolutely certain at their headquarters at 50 Church street. One of the officials, who refused to permit the use of his name said:

"There will be no strike. We will accept the offer and there will eventually be a settlement."

The committee promised a definite answer to Messrs. Neill and Knapp today.

Judge Knapp is expected here from Washington late today. "Judge Knapp and I are only acting as mediators," said Commissioner Neill "and if as mediators we obtain an acceptance of the proposition of arbitration, then it would be for the railroads and the engineers to select one arbitrator each; those two to select the third."

The engineers appeared to be delighted with the offer of mediation, declaring that their position with respect to increased wages was perfectly sound and that if the question were put up for arbitration they were certain to obtain some concessions.

The demands for increased wages were made by the engineers on fifty railroads east of Chicago and north of the Potomac river and Grand Chief Stone said that a strike order would affect 54,000 engine drivers, in turn the engineers' strike would throw 200,000 firemen, trainmen, conductors and other railroad employees out of work.

There was a general belief when the meeting began that the managers (Continued on page 5, column 2)

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

A MODERN SIDNEY.

When you visit the city of Washington go to Arlington cemetery. Among the other monuments of valor and patriotism you will find one with this inscription:

"Never mind me. I am all right. Look after the other fellows."

If you will go to the newspaper files you will find the story of the heroic ending of Midshipman James Crouse, who died from injuries received in an explosion in the turret of the battleship Georgia while at target practice on Cape Cod bay.

Crouse was only nineteen.

He was at work at one of the guns in the turret. His classmate and chum, Midshipman Goldthwaite, served another gun. The latter died from his injuries inside of two hours.

Crouse, frightfully wounded and badly burned, hearing cries for help, retraced his steps toward the hospital, took hold and helped to care for the wounded seamen.

While he was gallantly helping in this work attention was called to his own deplorable condition. It was then he uttered the noble words that are carved on his monument.

"Never mind me. I am all right. Look after the other fellows."

Taken to the hospital, he died unflinchingly.

And that is all.

That is to say, that is all the newspaper stories tell of this American lad's heroic sacrifice. But it is not all that is worth saying, because—

Such an act of sublime self abnegation is greater than any sermon, grander than any poem, finer than any symphony, more beautiful than any picture.

It is a story of divinity revealing itself in flesh—a moment of incarnation—the highest expression of unselfishness.

One instinctively thinks of the dying Sidney, who on the battlefield of Zutphen pushed the proffered cup of water from his own parched lips and said, indicating a nearby soldier who looked longingly at the cup:

"Give it to him. His need is greater than mine."

The strapping Crouse was kin of soul to the gallant Sidney and to all the heroic souls of history.

His character?

It is all there—on the monument.

RINGWORM

An Easy and Very Successful Treatment.

Try This Remedy at Our Risk.

You know what ringworm looks like—starting as a little circular patch of tiny pimples, which dry up into scales and are followed by another crop on the outer edge, thus enlarging the ring all the time.

It may be caught from other children, and from dogs and cats. Tincture of iodine is the old remedy, but we have a better one now—Saxon Salve, our new skin remedy.

Apply Saxon Salve a few times (as directed by the book in the box) and the ringworm vanishes. Saxon Salve so saturates the skin with its powerful, yet soothing ingredients, that the ringworm parasites are destroyed.

Of course, Saxon Salve has many other uses. All kinds of skin eruptions and disorders, eczema, barber's itch and tetter yield to Saxon Salve. It is a wonderful remedy and we guarantee it most positively. The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

When a medicine must be given to young children it should be pleasant to take. A FRIEND, NOT AN ENEMY.

A child lost in an eastern city the other day fled from an approaching patrolman, fell under the wheels of a street car and was killed. The officer of the law, instead of being looked on as a friend and protector, was viewed by the childish mind as a person of dire purposes to be shunned. How many parents are bringing their children up in fear of policemen? The number doubtless is considerable, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It seems a somewhat prevalent habit among fathers and mothers to try to restrain the exuberance of their boys, for instance, by telling them that unless they are good the police will get them. The habit is cruel, as well as dangerous. It plants fear in hearts that should be taught confidence. Children should be taught that a patrolman is their friend, their protector against wrongdoers and their guide in time of trouble. The mother who, in order to hush a noisy child, threatens him with an appeal to an officer in uniform, is implanting in the child's mind a fear which may some day bring the child into peril of death. It is a wicked travesty on truth and justice for a parent thus to play upon the natural timidity of a child. If the parent does not live to regret it he has merely his good fortune to thank for the escape. The risk is not worth taking, at any rate.

Experiments at the Pasteur Institute in Paris have demonstrated that chickens can thrive without bacteria, though most vertebrates seem to require them. The experiments were made by Doctor Cohendy at the suggestion of Professor Metchnikoff. Doctor Cohendy used a sterilized incubator. He introduced three eggs which were about hatching. He sterilized them on the outside, the air apparatus was carefully filtered and all the food was perfectly sterilized. Several sets of chickens raised in this way were found after six weeks to be too big for the incubator and were taken out and compared with chickens which had been raised in the ordinary way. The tests showed that the incubator chickens were absolutely free of microbes, though after some hours of unsterilized life their digestive tubes contained thousands of them.

A New York factory commission has discovered in its investigations that from 50 to 75 per cent of fires in that city are caused by carelessness, principally in the thoughtless use of matches, cigars and cigarettes. The terrible results of this carelessness should be made an important point in the education of children, to the end of its elimination from the ordinary risks of life. Apparently, not even the horrors resulting from this thoughtlessness can induce the average adult to take the very slight trouble required to prevent it.

BEAUTY NO LONGER A MARVEL

Time Has Gone By When World Stopped to Wonder at Loveliness of Women.

Within the last week two well-known, beautiful, rich society girls, both young, both popular, with all doors to which society has the key flung open before them, have elected to go into an East End hospital and scrub floors for pauper invalids. Perhaps they will not stick to it; the important thing is that they want to try it.

The fact is that we are no longer sufficiently satisfied with beauty to think a woman has justified herself by being good to look at. Thirty or forty years ago people came from every part of the world to see Georgiana Lady Dudley, Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Cornwallis-West walk in the park. At an earlier date the beautiful Gunningss caused riots, so great was the anxiety to see them. Anne of Austria drew people from the most inaccessible corners of what was then a very inaccessible world, who made their way with year-long journeys to Paris, caught a glimpse of her entering her carriage and went home again saying they had seen loveliness itself. Today we would not cross the road to see a pretty woman, possibly because there are so many of them. Indeed, beautiful women of today are more admired by women than by men. But in any case beauty as a profession is dead.—London Truth.

Constipation brings many ailments in its train and is the primary cause of much sickness. Keep your bowels regular, madam, and you will escape many of the ailments to which women are subject. Constipation is a very simple little thing, but like many simple things, it may lead to serious consequences. Nature often needs a little assistance and when Chamberlain's Tablets are given at the first indication, much distress and suffering may be avoided. Sold by all dealers.

Indianapolis, April 23.—"It's a matter of principle with me, judge, and before I'll pay that 35 cents you can send me to jail," said George Andre who was on trial in police court charged with violation of the hotel law.

Andre said he believed it was his duty to protest against the discrimination practiced by the restaurant at the union station. He had ordered two eggs, bread and butter and coffee there, and they had charged him 35 cents. A man next to him had been charged much less for the same things. It was explained to Andre that this was because the other man was an employee. That made no difference. Policemen were called, and they asked Andre to pay, saying they did not want to arrest him. Andre was firm. Judge Collins continued the case.

OWNERSHIP OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

Advocated By Stephen M. Reynolds.

AN INDIANA OBJECT LESSON

How Indiana Tried to Build a Railroad, and How It Cost the People $1,500,000 and Brought No Results—An Experience That the Advocacy of Government Ownership of Public Utilities Brings Sharply to Mind.

Indianapolis.—"We advocate the collective ownership of all social property and the democratic management thereof. By social property I mean railroads, telephone and telegraph lines, express companies, sleeping car companies, street and interurban railways, water works, gas companies and the like; in fact, all public utilities, to be operated by the people and for the people, and not by the capitalist for the benefit of the capitalist."

This sentiment was uttered by Mr. Stephen M. Reynolds, Socialist candidate for governor, in speaking of the preparations now in progress for the Socialist national convention which will meet in this city on May 12. He said that his party is preparing to make an aggressive campaign throughout the state and country and he is taking a very optimistic view of the situation. Mr. Reynolds has been a Socialist for fourteen years, has made the race for congress in the Fifth district, and has been the nominee of his party for mayor of Terre Haute.

Under his direction the Socialists are pushing the propaganda night and day, having 200 organizations in the state and in some of the smaller towns, especially in the mining districts, having succeeded in electing the local officers.

A declaration in favor of government or popular ownership of public utilities by the Socialist national convention and its advocacy in the campaign, will no doubt recall to many the experience of Indiana in the building of the old Madison and Lafayette railroad which was a part of the system of international improvements undertaken in 1836 and ending disastrously several years later. It has been but a few years since a New Yorker sent to a lawyer in this city some $7,000 of the old bonds and the state paid them after a suit in court in which the legality was satisfactorily established. No one, it seems, knew of their existence till they were presented for payment, it having been supposed that all of the bonds had been paid and canceled.

The Madison and Lafayette railroad was authorized by an act of the legislature of 1836 and it was begun under the direction of a board of public improvement appointed under the act and empowered to "establish such rates of toll or other charges for passengers or property as they may deem reasonable and most consistent with the public interests." The expenses of operation were to be paid out of the earnings of the road.

IGNORED APPEAL OF THE TITANIC

Unknown Vessel Sailed Away
From Sinking Ship.

ITS LIGHTS PLAINLY SEEN

Bloody Mutiny in Morocco.
Evidence Introduced in the Senate Hearing Indicates That Help Was Near at Hand, but That Unknown Vessel Refused to Respond to the Expiring Titanic's Signals of Distress.

Washington, April 23.—The fact that a vessel was within sight of the great liner when it came into fatal collision with the iceberg, has been developed by the senate committee's hearing into the Titanic disaster. This unidentified vessel was headed toward the Titanic. So close was she that her lights were easily discernible from the Titanic bridge. Yet this mysterious ship failed to respond to the burning rockets that were sent up for more than an hour as signals of distress, or to the urgent electric flashes which in the Morse code spelled the words
"Come at once; we are sinking."

In the opinion of some of the Titanic's officers who stood on the bridge on that fatal night of April 14, this vessel within sight of the Titanic acknowledged the signals, but sailed away unheeding. This startling information was imparted to the committee by J. G. Boxhall, fourth officer of the Titanic, who also gave impressive details of what occurred on the bridge of the Titanic just preceding and following the collision with the iceberg. According to this officer, Captain Smith himself was on the bridge when the big liner plunged into the great mass of ice, but conditions were so that it was impossible to see the berg even after the ship had come into contact with it.

All attempts to shake Boxhall's conviction that he saw a ship ahead of the Titanic were unavailing. He declared he saw two of her masthead lights and that later, as she came nearer, he saw her red side light. He had no doubt if the Titanic had been equipped with searchlights, he said in answer to questions, that it would have been possible to attract the attention of this ship. Boxhall said he saw no one refuse to get into a life-boat nor did he see anyone denied permission to enter the boats. He declared that he personally made certain when the ship left Belfast that all her lifeboats were properly equipped and provisioned.

Besides Officer Boxhall's dramatic story the senate committee heard an impressive account through Vice President Franklin of the White Star line of the uncertainty and fears that attended the efforts of the officials of the White Star line to ascertain just what had happened to the great Titanic. All the messages that flashed from the White Star line offices in these hours of uncertainty were introduced in evidence and also the wireless dispatches that came back bearing only the most meager news of the tragedy. The messages introduced in evidence for the White Star people tended strongly to support their contention that they had no definite knowledge that the Titanic had gone to the bottom until 6:30 on Monday night. There were also included in the record all the messages which passed between P. A. S. Franklin, vice president of the International Mercantile Marine company and J. Bruce Ismay, managing director, in regard to the latter's plan for holding up the Cedric and sailing at once on her with the survivors of the officers and crew from the Titanic. It was pointed out that practically all of the wireless messages, which Mr. Ismay sent from the Carpathia to Mr. Franklin in regard to this plan of transshipping before the Carpathia reached her pier
were signed Yamsl, which is Ismay's cable name. Vice President Franklin acknowledged on the stand that the use of this cable name, while common in England, had not prevailed in dispatches addressed to the New York offices. Mr. Franklin could not tell whether the name was registered in the cable offices in New York. He did not think it was. The dispatches from Mr. Ismay showed that he planned to have the lifeboats of the Titanic taken off with the crew and officers at Quarantine. Mr. Franklin declared there had been a "terrible mistake" in regard to Mr. Ismay's intentions and that the managing director never would have proposed the arrangement for sailing on the Cedric if he had been aware of conditions in this country.

MARTIN A. KNAPP

Head of Commerce Court
Paves Way For Mediation.

MEDIATORS SEEK TO AVERT HUGE STRIKE

Eastern Roads and Engineers
May Get Together.

New York, April 23.—By the prompt action of Martin A. Knapp, president judge of the United States commerce court, and Charles P. Neill, United States commissioner of labor, orders
which were to call out locomotive engineers of the fifty railroads east of Chicago and north of the Ohio river by 6 o'clock tomorrow morning were postponed.

Three hours after W. S. Stone and the chiefs of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers had announced that the strike which would cripple the east and New England, would be on as soon as the orders could be carried out, the two government representatives arrested action by a tender of their services in mediation. This offer was received with favor by Mr. Stone and his aides, who held their advisory committee of fifty chairmen, one man from each railroad, in the city. Captain J. C. Stuart, vice president of the Erie railroad and chairman of the conference committee of railroad managers, which had been dealing with the union men since January, just as promptly declared that he will submit the proposition to his committee. Personally he had always favored peaceable negotiations, but he had not the power to do anything.

There is no doubt that the chances for a peaceable way out of the difficulty without forcing either side to back down, was afforded by the offer
of the government men.

Denounced as Impostor.

Pittsburg, April 23.—Captain A. S.
Henderson, former commander of the White Star liner Friesland, who retired from sea duty six months ago to become instructor at the Carnegie Technical schools, denounced as an impostor the man Klein, who gave a sensational interview in Cleveland alleging drunkenness on the part of some of the crew, claiming to have been a seaman on the Titanic.

Nice, April 23.—A woman named Navratil, living here, says the two

now being cared for by Miss Hays of New York, are hers. Mrs. Navratil says she was abandoned by her husband, who ran off to America under the assumed name of Hoffmann. He took the children and his mistress
with him.

SELECTION OF LAYING HENS TO INSURE ULTIMATE SUCCESS

Poultryman Must Have Fixed in His Mind Line He Wishes to Follow and Then Bend Every Effort to Carry
It Out—Several Little Things That Need Consideration.

Rhode Island Reds—Good Layers and Weigh Heavily.

(By A. G. PHILLIPS, Kansas.)

To insure the best success in this work, the poultryman must first have fixed in his mind the line he wishes to follow and then bend every effort to carry it out. If he wishes to breed hens for eggs, the first thing he must do is to select his stock with that object in view.

A farmer who feeds steers for beef production picks out individuals which conform closest to the type of animal which he considers would make the best feeder. This type is entirely different from the one a dairyman would select for his dairy herd. The man who selects a horse to use on a heavy drag wagon hunts for one which he thinks can best do that work, while the man selecting a race horse would pick one of an entirely different conformation.

Thus, in intelligent selection of our live stock the purpose for which it is to be used is first determined. In applying this principle in the poultry
business, there are several things which should be considered in selecting hens for layers.

The first thing to notice concerning the shape is, as to whether or not the hen is rangy or bony. A bony hen indicates a meat producer, while the more rangy one indicates the production of eggs. Since the development of the egg, to a large extent, takes place in the region of the body below
the broad part of the back, that part of the body should be broader than the fore part. This gives to the body
a V-shaped appearance as viewed from the top, the small part of the V lying toward the front. When a hen is in heavy laying condition, her abdomen is lower than the breast line.
This gives the body the appearance of being V-shaped as viewed from the side along the top and bottom lines, with the small part of the V toward the front. This enlargement of the body in the abdominal region

makes the back appear somewhat narrower, giving the body a V-shaped appearance from the back downward
on the sides as viewed from the rear.
Thus, a body V-shaped in three directions indicates large productive powers.

A good layer is longer in body, neck
and legs than a meat-producing hen.
She stands up well and has a well spread tail. Observation has shown that a pinch-tailed Leghorn is not generally as good a layer as is a fan-tailed one.

The character of the head furnishings is an indication of the hen's laying condition. When a hen is in full laying her comb is full and bright red. Some Plymouth Rocks when laying heavily will have lopped combs, and therefore become disqualified as show birds. When hens are molting they lose all their color in face and comb and the size of their combs become very small, but as soon as laying commences, the combs enlarge and the color returns. Many instances have been noted with Leghorns and Minorcas which indicate that the birds with the largest and reddest
combs are in heavy-laying condition.

A laying hen works and hunts for food all day, is the first off of the roost and the last to go to roost.

Some claim the pelvic bone test to be final and conclusive. Immediately below the tail at the end of side pieces of the back are two somewhat bony protuberances. These are called the pelvic or "lay" bones, and are just above the vent through which the eggs must pass. When an egg is laid, these bones must be forced apart to allow its free passage. When these bones are soft and pliable, and spread sufficient to allow three fingers to be placed between them, it is an indication that the hen is laying. If they are hard and bony, and close together, the hen would not be considered as laying at that time.

BODIES OF MANY OF TITANIC'S VICTIMS

They Are Now Being Brought to Halifax

Halifax, N. S., April 23.—The cable ship Mackay-Bennett sends word she has fifty-three bodies picked up from the Titanic wreck and which either have been identified or are in such condition that it is probable they can be identified when brought to Halifax.
Orders were sent to the Mackay-Bennett by the White Star line to steam for Halifax with the bodies that have been recovered, and the ship was notified at the same time that the Western Union cable ship Minia would be dispatched to the scene to relieve her.

The intention of the Mackay-Bennett when she left this port was to bring back only such bodies as were identified or identifiable with the extreme probability that many unknown bodies would have to be returned to the sea. A clergyman was taken to perform the burial service in such cases. The same thing is being done with the Minia. The Minia takes more than a clergyman for this purpose.
She received on board a quantity of old iron to be used as weights in taking to the depths of the ocean the bodies that are not retained by her. The Minia's equipment for this expedition also includes 150 coffins and eighty tons of ice. With favorable weather
she will reach the scene of the disaster or the point where the bodies have been reported or found, in forty-eight or fifty hours, and the Mackay-Bennett will require the same time to return.

George Widener's Body Among Them.

New York, April 23.—The White Star heard from the two commercial cable company boats which they sent out after the Mackay-Bennett cable steamer, which has been searching for bodies. The steamship company got a cable telling that twenty-seven bodies of those recovered have been identified, but the trouble in transmitting accurate dispatches by wireless was so great that a large number of the names received at this end do not tally with the names of those lost. Among those reported identified was George Widener, son of the Philadelphia traction magnate.

President and Secretary of State Discuss Mexican Situation.

Washington, April 23.—Conditions in Mexico were made the subject of a conference by President Taft and Secretary Knox. It was practically decided that if it becomes necessary to provide transportation to this country for Americans who are stranded on the west coast of Mexico, that the gun-boat Yorktown and the collier Prometheus will be used for the purpose.
These vessels are now at San Jose,
Guatemala.

No answer has been received from Counsel Letcher at Chihuahua concerning the demands he was instructed to make on General Orozco, the rebel leader, for the release of two unknown Americans who have been incarcerated by Orozco since March

the departure of Senor Calere, former foreign minister, who is on his way to Washington to assume the duties of ambassador.

Details of Fez Battle.

Tangier April 23.—Since the mutiny of the native troops was put down
more details of the trouble at Fez have been received. About thirty French citizens were massacred. The Jews were treated in a barbarous manner
many of them being thrown from the housetops. Many girls were violated and kidnapped. The French casualties during the fighting were about 100 killed and wounded. The mutineers had 800 killed and about 1,000 more were captured.

STORM'S DEATH LIST GROWING

Total Reaches Half a Hundred and Is Not Complete.

COMMUNICATION INTERRUPTED

With the General Prostration of Wires
in the Storm-Swept Districts Details of the Double Cyclone Which Swept Over Northwestern Indiana and Central Illinois Are Delayed—Georgia and Alabama Also Hard Hit.

Chicago, April 23.—More than a half hundred persons were killed, as later details indicate, and more than 500 injured by the two tornadoes that swept over northwestern Indiana and northeastern, central and southern Illinois. Later advices may increase the number of dead, or the number may be slightly decreased by the sifting out of duplicated reports. The towns and villages reporting show the following:

Places.	Dead.	Injured.
Bush, Ill.,	18	100
Morocco, Ind.,	10	12
Wellesville, Ill.,	7	41
Campus, Ill.,	3	6
Grant Park, Ill.,	5	41
Near Murphysboro, Ill.,	6	300
Sheldon, Ill.,	1	1
Near Rensselaer, Ind.,	1	6
Lowell, Ind.,		10
Scattered casualties	8	20

Miles of telegraph and telephone wires were blown down, farmhouses were demolished in the path of the storm, and it is probable the death list will be increased when communication is restored with all points over which the tornado passed. Though there is no way of estimating the damage by the storm, it is certain to run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Trolley lines throughout the storm-swept district suffered heavy damage on account of the destruction of the poles.

TWENTY-FIVE DEAD

Cyclonic Storms Sweep Over Middle
Georgia and East Alabama.

Atlanta, Ga., April 23.—Probably twenty-five persons were killed and over a hundred injured as the result of cyclonic storms which swept portions of west and middle Georgia and east Alabama. In the latter section the storm struck Adamsville, Pinkney City, Brookside and several other villages. Fifteen persons are reported dead in these places and many injured. In Brookside it is reported that thirty houses were destroyed. A large area was covered by the storm in eastern Alabama and residences and barns of many farmers were destroyed. Mail followed the storm and destroyed the young cotton and corn.

At Newborn, in Newborn county, six people are reported dead and more than a score injured. Many houses were wrecked and the occupants caught in the ruins. There was much damage done at Hampton and two women are reported killed. The storm was very severe at Cedarstown and in Polk county, Georgia, it cut a path of ruin almost through the county. Owing to the prostration of the telephone and the telegraph wires, it is impossible to get an accurate list of the dead and injured.

STUCK TO ROOMS

Many of the Titanic's Passengers
Laughed at Alarm.

New York, April 23.—One feature of the Titanic disaster that is expected to occupy the attention of the senate investigating committee is why some of the lifeboats were not full to capacity when sent away. Many boats held only twenty or thirty when they were dropped into the sea. Others picked up swimming men and still were not overtaxed.

Emily Badman, an English girl, who sailed third-class on the Titanic to visit friends in Syracuse, said that she heard stewards appealing to women to get dressed and be ready to take to the boats, and that many women laughed and told the stewards they were foolish.

"An hour after the ship struck,"
said Miss Badman, "I made my way
with some girl friends to the top deck.
I heard officers shout orders to men to get their wives ready and heard men say that it was better to stay on the ship than trust themselves to the boats. I did not get away until the last boat but one. By that time, of course, everybody knew that the ship was sinking because all decks were under except the top. I believe that dozens of people were drowned in their staterooms. I heard that some locked their doors and refused to open them when stewards knocked and warned them there was not much time to lose. One steward said that he spent most of his time between the collision and the foundering, trying to get women and children on deck, but that many told him it was nonsense
to worry and that they did not intend to get panicky.

The senate investigating service would perform a good service if it would verify the report that a ship had passed within a few miles of the disabled Titanic and had refused to answer the calls for assistance. If this ship did travel within hailing distance of the ill fated vessel and the officers heard the calls for help and refused for any reason to answer them they would be guilty of criminal neglect of the grossest character and should be properly punished. It hardly seems possible to any civilized person that one ship could have seen a sister ship in need, and realizing that the possible of rescuing all the passengers would be small, continue on her way, leaving the passengers and members of the crew to escape the best way they could. If the captain or other officers heard the call for help and failed to answer it they are deserving of the most severe punishment that could be meted out by a just judge.

F. J. Waldo, the late editor of the Rising Sun Recorder, was one of the oldest newspaper men in southern Indiana. He became interested in journalism in early life and contributed many articles for leading papers, and since 1873 had been the owner and editor of the Recorder. He was a man of excellent character and the quality of clean news published in his paper bespoke for him the high ideals for which he was so well known.

J. "Brass" Ismay that noble and worthy hero, who for some unknown reason permitted three life boats to get away without finding a place in one of them, is endeavoring to answer the many criticisms which have been fired towards him. However, his open letters may come thick and fast, but it will be a long time before the American people "quit kickin' his dog around."

MONEY QUESTION AGAIN

Democrats May Have Split When Problem is Considered.

(The Indianapolis Star.) The perennial money question, which split the Democratic party wide open in 1896, is going to bob up serenely at the Baltimore convention, and it may prove a rock upon which the Democracy of the nation again will be divided.

The Alabama state convention, dominated by Representative Underwood, Democratic leader of the House, has started the ball rolling by adopting a money plank which, it is learned, is a forerunner of an attempt that will be made to commit the Democracy in its national platform to a reform of the currency laws, of the United States along lines that will be approved by the "conservative" business interests of the country.

William J. Bryan, of course, is waiting to swat any effort of that kind, and there is good reason to believe that the Bryan and anti-Bryan influences in the convention will meet in fierce combat over the money plank.

The movement just started by the Alabama state convention is regarded as of the highest significance. Representative Underwood is understood to be on very friendly terms with big New York business interests. Therefore, what is becoming known as "the Alabama plan" is certain to prove of increasing interest and importance as the national convention draws near.

The resolutions adopted by the Alabama state convention are a little obscure, but Washington is becoming accurately advised as to the details of the Alabama plan. The plan is a close approximation of the currency reform scheme embraced in the bill introduced by former Representative Fowler of New Jersey and provides for a co-ordination of banks and a bank-regulated currency. Its proponents say that in its essence it means a reconstruction of the antiquated banking laws of the country so as primarily to insure an elastic currency.

William J. Bryan's friends at the capital are sounding the alarm as they declare that the Underwood plan is only another form of an old, old effort to turn the currency system of the country over to the control and regulation of the banks for their own selfish purposes.

EXPLAINS SCHOOL CHANGES.

State Superintendent Sends Letter Concerning Teachers and Courses.

Superintendent J. A. Linke has received from the State Superintendent a letter explaining the changes authorized by the state board of education in the high school course so as to enable schools, with proper equipment, to introduce extensively industrial training in place of other subjects which have long held sway.

The letter also sets out that the state board canceled every certificate formerly granted certified high schools, or schools with a three-year high school course, and that recertification will be made only on examination by members of the board. It was explained in the letter that because of the lack of teachers under the act regulating the minimum requirements of teachers, it was formerly necessary for the board to be lenient in certifications in order to provide an adequate supply of teachers. Since the shortness of teachers has been overcome, the board will henceforth, it was set out, insist on rigid compliance with three-year high school requirements.

Under the law, no person may teach in the common schools of the state who has not had twelve weeks' professional training following a minimum course of study equivalent to that prescribed by the state board for high schools offering three-year courses and followed in a certified school.

Trees Along The Fences.

Along the farmers' fences throughout the State the birds, squirrels and the wind have planted trees. Many are planted by these agents, but few are permitted to stand. The species most commonly found are walnut, wild cherry, ash, maple and elm.

Most of these, if cared for, would grow into valuable trees, but as generally found they show that they have been browsed, pruned with an ax or not at all, and with a trunk too short to make a twelve-foot log. Tall trees are more valuable and it costs less to grow them along the fence. They should be pruned up and not be permitted to form a fork until the height of a good length sawlog is reached. When the top of the tree is high the shade is so widely distributed that it has little effect on the adjacent crop.

Trees along the fences add beauty to the surroundings. They attract our birds and often serve as a retreat from the storm and birds of prey.

The workman in the field welcomes them as a place where he and his horses can enjoy their shade and cool breezes.

Stock of all kinds in the field will seek the shelter offered by a tree from the hot rays of the sun and from storms. It is true that occasionally an animal is killed by lightning under a tree, but during a storm animals first seek trees and if there are none, they will huddle closely up against a fence, and more animals are killed along fences than under trees.

Some farmers purposely leave a few trees along the fence in each field. This practice, as well as the planting of trees along the roadside, is to be encouraged.

In speaking upon the candidacy of Seba A. Barnes for circuit judge, the Greensburg News says:

If the people who attended the Price trial were located in the 40th judicial circuit, Seba A. Barnes would find them supporting him in his race for Judge, in the primaries on May 9th. He is a genial, pleasant gentleman and demonstrated in this case that he is a lawyer of ability, with a legal mind that indicates the right kind of material for the judgeship. His home is at Seymour, where he is seeking the nomination for judge of their judicial circuit.

About Paint that masquerades as being cheap

Look behind the mask of price and judge paint by its one true standard of value—the cost per gallon for each year of service which it gives.

A paint "cheap" in price will wear anywhere from six months to two or three years—let's be generous and say two to three years.

LUCAS TINTED GLOSS PAINT

ONCE USED—ALWAYS PREFERRED

will wear five years or more.

Divide the price of a cheap paint by two or three and the price of Tinted Gloss by five and then you will have the true basis on which to buy paint—the cost per gallon for each year's service you get out of the paint.

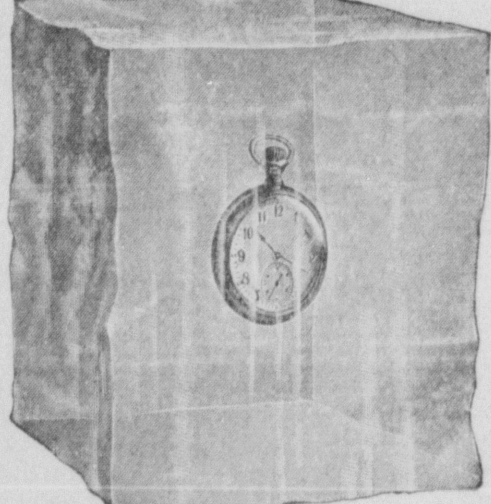

Your figures may show that the paint which masquerades as being cheap is really more expensive than a good paint like Tinted Gloss.

would accept the offer of the government simply because they could not afford to have the public believe that the railroads would stand in the way of anything that would "make for peace."

SEVERAL CHANGES MADE

H. S. Smith Promoted to Position of Trainmaster Succeeding F. J. Cook.

As the result of the resignation of J. F. Cook as trainmaster of the B. & O. S-W. several changes were made today in the local division offices. H. S. Smith, who for some time has been chief dispatcher, became trainmaster to succeed Mr. Cook. G. V. Copeland, formerly night chief dispatcher was promoted to chief dispatcher and J. H. DeMann became night chief. R. J. Sanders was promoted to the place formerly held by Mr. DeMann. This will leave one vacancy among the operators and this place will likely be filled soon.

The new trainmaster was appointed chief dispatcher in February 1911 and is well known among the railroad men. His service with the company has ably qualified him for his new duties which have a larger responsibility. Mr. Copeland has been with the B. & O. S-W. since 1897, having accepted a position at that time as operator. He has had much experience in railroading and is regarded as one of the most accurate dispatchers in the service of the company.

Mr. Cook who resigned has not yet stated what future plans he has in view.

There are more people today in this city whose buying is "influenced by advertising" than ever before. As the number grows, advertising becomes necessary, where it was once merely wise and profitable.

The senate investigating service would perform a good service if it would verify the report that a ship had passed within a few miles of the disabled Titanic and had refused to answer the calls for assistance. If this ship did travel within hailing distance of the ill fated vessel and the officers heard the calls for help and refused for any reason to answer them they would be guilty of criminal neglect of the grossest character and should be properly punished. It hardly seems possible to any civilized person that one ship could have seen a sister ship in need, and realizing that the possible of rescuing all the passengers would be small, continue on her way, leaving the passengers and members of the crew to escape the best way they could. If the captain or other officers heard the call for help and failed to answer it they are deserving of the most severe punishment that could be meted out by a just judge.

F. J. Waldo, the late editor of the Rising Sun Recorder, was one of the oldest newspaper men in southern Indiana. He became interested in journalism in early life and contributed many articles for leading papers, and since 1873 had been the owner and editor of the Recorder. He was a man of excellent character and the quality of clean news published in his paper bespoke for him the high ideals for which he was so well known.

J. "Brass" Ismay that noble and worthy hero, who for some unknown reason permitted three life boats to get away without finding a place in one of them, is endeavoring to answer the many criticisms which have been fired towards him. However, his open letters may come thick and fast, but it will be a long time before the American people "quit kickin'" his dog around.

MONEY QUESTION AGAIN

Democrats May Have Split When Problem is Considered.
(The Indianapolis Star.)

The perennial money question, which split the Democratic party wide open in 1896, is going to bob up serenely at the Baltimore convention, and it may prove a rock upon which the Democracy of the nation again will be divided.

The Alabama state convention, dominated by Representative Underwood, Democratic leader of the House, has started the ball rolling by adopting a money plank which, it is learned, is a forerunner of an attempt that will be made to commit the Democracy in its national platform to a reform of the currency laws, of the United States along lines that will be approved by the "conservative" business interests of the country.

William J. Bryan, of course, is waiting to swat any effort of that kind, and there is good reason to believe that the Bryan and anti-Bryan influences in the convention will meet in fierce combat over the money plank.

The movement just started by the Alabama state convention is regarded as of the highest significance. Representative Underwood is understood to be on very friendly terms with big New York business interests. Therefore, what is becoming known as "the Alabama plan" is certain to prove of increasing interest and importance as the national convention draws near.

The resolutions adopted by the Alabama state convention are a little obscure, but Washington is becoming accurately advised as to the details of the Alabama plan. The plan is a close approximation of the currency reform scheme embraced in the bill introduced by former Representative Fowler of New Jersey and provides for a co-ordination of banks and a bank-regulated currency. Its proponents say that in its essence it means a reconstruction of the antiquated banking laws of the country so as primarily to insure an elastic currency.

William J. Bryan's friends at the capital are sounding the alarm as they declare that the Underwood plan is only another form of an old, old effort to turn the currency system of the country over to the control and regulation of the banks for their own selfish purposes.

John Hackett has received word from his son, Mike Hackett, who has been in Albuquerque, N. M., for some time on account of his health, that he does not improve and will be brought back home.—Bedford Mail.

EXPLAINS SCHOOL CHANGES.

State Superintendent Sends Letter Concerning Teachers and Courses.

Superintendent J. A. Linke has received from the State Superintendent a letter explaining the changes authorized by the state board of education in the high school course so as to enable schools, with proper equipment, to introduce extensively industrial training in place of other subjects which have long held sway.

The letter also sets out that the state board canceled every certificate formerly granted certified high schools, or schools with a three-year high school course, and that recertification will be made only on examination by members of the board. It was explained in the letter that because of the lack of teachers under the act regulating the minimum requirements of teachers, it was formerly necessary for the board to be lenient in certifications in order to provide an adequate supply of teachers. Since the shortness of teachers has been overcome, the board will henceforth, it was set out, insist on rigid compliance with three-year high school requirements.

Under the law, no person may teach in the common schools of the state who has not had twelve weeks' professional training following a minimum course of study equivalent to that prescribed by the state board for high schools offering three-year courses and followed in a certified school.

Trees Along The Fences.

Along the farmers' fences throughout the State the birds, squirrels and the wind have planted trees. Many are planted by these agents, but few are permitted to stand. The species most commonly found are walnut, wild cherry, ash, maple and elm.

Most of these, if cared for, would grow into valuable trees, but as generally found they show that they have been browsed, pruned with an ax or not at all, and with a trunk too short to make a twelve-foot log. Tall trees are more valuable and it costs less to grow them along the fence. They should be pruned up and not be permitted to form a fork until the height of a good length sawlog is reached. When the top of the tree is high the shade is so widely distributed that it has little effect on the adjacent crop.

Trees along the fences add beauty to the surroundings. They attract our birds and often serve as a retreat from the storm and birds of prey.

The workman in the field welcomes them as a place where he and his horses can enjoy their shade and cool breezes.

Stock of all kinds in the field will seek the shelter offered by a tree from the hot rays of the sun and from storms. It is true that occasionally an animal is killed by lightning under a tree, but during a storm animals first seek trees and if there are none, they will huddle closely up against a fence, and more animals are killed along fences than under trees.

Some farmers purposely leave a few trees along the fence in each field. This practice, as well as the planting of trees along the roadside, is to be encouraged.

The War Fifty Years Ago

First Encounter of the Army of the Potomac With the Defenders of the Peninsula--Battle of Lee's Mills, Near Yorktown--Gallantry of the Vermont Brigade. Many Green Mountain Heroes--Fighting Begins at New Orleans--Captain D. D. Porter's Mortar Flotilla Opens Fire Upon the Confederate Forts--Farragut's Fleet Moves Up the River--Gallant Exploit Cutting Away Chain Obstructions Under Fire.

By Captain GEORGE L. KILMER, Late U. S. V.

ON April 16, 1862, the first important action of the Army of the Potomac in the peninsular campaign was fought on the Yorktown line. This was a spirited attempt by the Federal troops to secure a foothold at the center of the Confederate position covering the approaches to Yorktown.

The peninsula is bounded on the north by York river, which is commanded by Yorktown and Gloucester, on opposite sides. Both places were strongly fortified to obstruct the entrance of the river by Federal gunboats. The Confederate batteries mounted fifty-six guns, many of which were rifled hundred pounders and could have sunk the entire fleet. The James river, which bounds the peninsula on the south, was in full possession of the Confederates. The line of defense at Yorktown was selected with great judgment. Taking advantage of the highest ground on the peninsula at that place and projecting a line of trenches and forts bearing a little southwest to a point connecting with the head of Warwick river, the engineers had continued the works down that stream to the James river.

Battle Near Lee's Mills.

Warwick river was a barrier between the Federals and the Confederate works which General J. B. Magruder had laid out and nearly completed before the Federals arrived in force. Midway of this line Magruder had placed a dam and protected it by rifle pits along the west bank and two redoubts mounting three cannon.

On the 15th General McClellan learned that the Confederates were strengthening these works and ordered the commander on this line to take action and prevent it. General W. F. Smith's division was nearest, and Smith gave the task to the Vermont brigade. Colonel R. B. Ayres stationed three batteries of his artillery brigade in position to shell the Confederate works, while a battalion of the Third Vermont waded the river.

Colonel Hyde was directed to send two companies of the Third, to be supported by two more companies, across to assault and drive the Confederates from the nearest rifle pits. If they succeeded in carrying these they were to announce the fact by cheers and waving a white handkerchief, when more troops were to be sent to support them and to attack the earthworks beyond. Colonel Hyde took for the attack Companies D, F, E and K. Company D, Captain Harrington, and F, Captain Pingree, formed in line near the river bank.

Dash of the Vermont Battalion.

About 3 o'clock on the 16th the guns of Mott's, Wheeler's and Kennedy's batteries opened a vigorous cannonade from the crest of the slope. Magruder's artillery responded, but his fire soon slackened under the storm of shot and shell, and the moment arrived for the Vermonters to advance.

The men pushed across the stream in good shape, though they were under a sharp musketry fire from the start and though the bottom was in many places covered with a network of felled trees, over which many tripped and fell, wetting both guns and ammunition. Plundering along in spite of all obstacles, however, the two companies reached the opposite bank and dashed straight for the rifle pits, driving out of them a force about equal in number to their own. They were soon joined by Companies E and K.

Corporal Hutchinson of Company D, who had been selected to signal the occupancy of the works by waving a handkerchief attached to his bayonet, had fallen, mortally wounded, but the men shouted lustily back across the stream, handkerchiefs were waved by several hands, and officers and men looked with anxiety for the promised supports. Their situation was a precarious one. The enemy was swiftly rallying and with no lack of troops. His first counter attack was made by the Fifteenth North Carolina, which came down on the double quick from its camp over the crest and charged the rifle pits. It was met by the men of the Third Vermont with a fire by which its commander, Colonel McKinney, was killed and some forty of his men killed and wounded and retired in extreme disorder.

Rally of the Confederates.

No supports followed the detachment of the Third Vermont. Meanwhile the Confederates gathered in heavy force. By the exertions of General Howell Cobb and Colonel Anderson the demoralized regiments were rallied and others brought up, till no less than seven regiments hemmed in the little band of Vermonters. Captain Pingree sent back two successive messengers to Colonel Hyde, asking either for reinforcements or for permission to retire.

The rattle of musketry and roar of artillery was too continuous at this time to permit orders to be heard for any distance, but those who did not hear saw that a retreat was ordered, and in five minutes the line had scattered back across the creek through a shower of musket balls. Of the 192 brave men who crossed the stream about 100 came back unharmed, bearing with them as many as they could of their wounded comrades. They had carried a line of rifle pits and had held their position in front of two Confederate brigades for forty minutes till they were ordered back.

A general cannonade was then opened by the Federal batteries, and four companies of the Fourth Vermont dashed across to attack a one gun redoubt near the stream, while four companies of the Sixth Vermont assaulted the Confederate rifle pits below the dam. Colonel Ayres' batteries fired over the heads of the Vermonters and then dashed into the stream with fixed bayonets. But an outburst of Confederate musketry and artillery fire met the assailants, and General Smith recalled the battalion of the Fourth to save it from destruction. The men of the Sixth, however, waded the stream, holding their muskets and cartridge boxes above their heads. The excited Confederates beyond fired over the heads of this column, and only a few rushed to the breastworks. It was madness to try to hold on, and orders came to retreat. In the advance about forty men fell and an equal number on the retreat.

Smith's division lost 164 killed and wounded and Magruder's Confederate command ninety-five in all. General Smith said in his report, "There were more individual acts of heroism performed than I ever heard of in the great battle."

Opening the Mississippi.

Farragut's naval expedition fitted out during the winter of 1862 to attack New Orleans came as an afterthought in Washington. The first plan adopted for prosecuting the war on the water was to blockade every important harbor on the southern coast. But the fleet of new Federal ironclads built on the upper Mississippi in the fall of 1861 was looking for more sea room which could only be had by seeking it downstream. Now, if ships could plow one way they could the other and in spite of the woeful unpreparedness of those times the contract was given out on the spur of the moment to open up the lower Mississippi and cut the Confederacy in two.

The outlook in the winter of 1862 didn't worry the Confederates blockaded in the Crescent City. "Nothing that walks can cross the swamps," was the cheerful cry of the populace on the levees. When Lincoln was appealed to by Captain D. D. Porter, U. S. N., who had been on blockade duty in the Gulf, to send ships and soldiers to New Orleans he said: "This should have been done before. The Mississippi is the backbone of the Confederacy."

The plan put down on paper was to send at once a Federal fleet mounting 200 guns, a powerful mortar flotilla and an army of 20,000 soldiers to raze the forts at the mouth of the Mississippi, capture New Orleans and fortify the river bluffs as far up as Vicksburg. At the same time the ironclad gunboats hemmed in around St. Louis and Cairo and never yet under fire would fight their way down the river and unite forces around Vicksburg.

Captain Porter created out of raw materials almost the mortar fleet, a peculiar adjunct of the navy designed to fight against land forts. The required vessels were not yet owned by the government when the expedition was planned. They were to number twenty, each carrying a thirteen inch mortar and two thirty-two pounder cannon.

The southerners appreciated the "backbone" importance of the Mississippi for the purpose long before President Lincoln coined the term. In April, 1861, while the business of seizing Federal forts on southern soil was very brisk, they had hoisted the bony blue flag over two old citadels standing on opposite sides of the river below New Orleans. Fort Jackson, the first above the mouth, was a star shaped fortress, built of stone and mounting seventy-four guns, heavy and light. There were strong bomb proofs and casemates and a citadel of heavy masonry, which, in anticipation of some raiding Farragut, they stored with ammunition and supplies for a long siege. Fort Philip, across the river from Fort Jackson, was built of stone and brick and mounted fifty-two guns.

Confederate Defenses.

The best channel up the river from the bar near the west bank under the guns of Fort Jackson. This passageway the Confederates blocked with a row of old hulks, anchored and bound together with chain cables. Several tugs and steamers fitted out for battle during the summer and fall of 1861 patrolled the river above the line of hulks, and farther upstream, in actual waiting while Farragut was scouring northern harbors for his ships, lay the new ironclad Louisiana, mounting twelve guns, and the ponderous whalebacked iron ram Manassas. Several converted steamers, cotton clad, with heavy bales around their engines and machinery, completed the river defense fleet. Still another ironclad, the Mississippi, was on the ways and nearly finished.

Farragut reached the army rendezvous in person Feb. 20, 1862, but not until March 18 were the war steamers assigned to him on the scene.

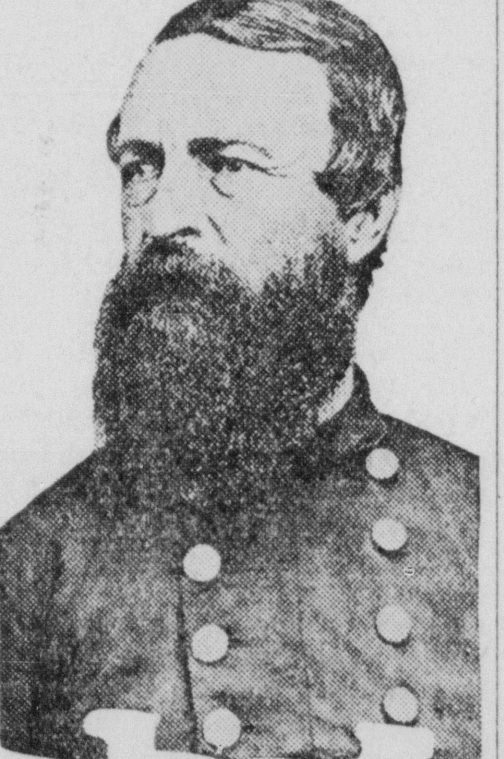

The fleet which finally went into action consisted of the first class screw sloops Hartford, Brooklyn, Richmond and Pensacola, the second class sloops Onondaga, Varuna and Iroquois, the screw gunboats Cayuga, Itasca, Katahdin, Kennebec, Kineo, Pinola, Sciota, Winona and Wissahickon, the sailing sloop Portsmouth and the side-wheeler Mississippi.

The Mortars Begin to Shoot.

On the 16th of April the fleet was well into the channel, within three miles of Fort Jackson. The mortar boats went into hiding on both banks of the river, curtained or disguised by the branches of trees. The range to Fort Jackson was one mile and a half and to Fort Philip two miles.

Porter's mortars opened fire upon the Confederate forts guarding the channel April 18. The third night of the bombardment the Federal vessels, Pinola and Itasca steamed up the river to sever the line of hulks and chains stretched across the stream under the guns of the fort. They were discovered by the enemy and fired upon.

The Pinola finally dropped astern, but the Itasca, under Lieutenant C. H. B. Caldwell, threw a grapnel aboard a CAPTAIN D. D. PORTER, U. S. N., COMMANDER OF THE MORTAR FLOTILLA AT NEW ORLEANS.

Confederate schooner in the line, which caught on the rail. The rail gave way, and the steamer, her engines moving slowly, grappled on the next hulk. The strong current soon caused both vessels to swing around under the guns of the forts. The Pinola ran to the assistance of her consort, and as soon as his ship was free again Lieutenant Caldwell steamed on through the opening he had made. Passing far enough beyond the obstructions to give the Itasca good headway, he turned downstream with a full head on, struck the chains holding the hulks together and tore them asunder by the weight of his ship.

THE VALUE OF A DEFINITE MESSAGE

By Rev. H. W. Pope,
Superintendent of Men of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—This then is the message which we have heard of Him, and declare unto you.—1 John 1:5.

The world has always been willing to listen to a man with a real message from heaven. Since the days of John the Baptist whenever anyone has manifestly been sent from God, and has borne witness of the truth, the people have turned out to hear from. Luther in his day, and Wesley and Whitefield in their, were recognized as true messengers of God.

William Carey brought another great thought from heaven, and Robert Raikes another. In our own land Dwight L. Moody and Francis E. Clark and Frances Willard have each been the bearer of rich messages from God.

All these have met with stout opposition, for "My thoughts are not your thoughts, saith the Lord," and yet eventually their message has been received, and has been incorporated into the life of the church.

One accent of the Holy Ghost, The heedless world hath never lost. That God has messages for the church of today no one can doubt. Never was there an age which needed divine wisdom more than ours. Great problems confront us, great dangers threaten us. Many of God's people seem dazed by the difficulties before them, and cry out in pitiful tones, "Who is sufficient for these things?" Instead of waiting upon God for a renewal of their strength, they resort to all manner of worldly expedients to gain the attention of the fickle crowd. Others recognizing clearly the same difficulties and dangers are clamoring loudly for "A man with a message."

Why should not every Christian be "A man with a message?"

It was not said of our day, "I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons, and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams?" Was it not said of all believers, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me?"

How to Obtain a Message.

There are grave difficulties in the way of even those who are busiest in the service of God. This is an age of hurry and worry, and unless we are very careful we shall fall into the spirit of the age, and allow ourselves to be robbed of that quiet and repose which is essential to a deep acquaintance with God. Somehow we must get time to be alone with God, time to let the truth as it is in Jesus filter down through our being until our whole life is saturated with its spirit. So shall we come forth from our closets each day with the dew of heaven upon our hearts, and with a fresh message upon our lips. "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches."

Avoid the Danger.

It is a dangerous thing to know God's will and not do it. And one of the most perilous things a Christian can do, is to try to hold his own simply, and not go forward into the deep things of God when thus led by the spirit. I have read of a Christian man who became so engrossed in his business that he largely lost his fellowship with God. After a while his business began to fail; he found that in a few weeks the vein of coal from which he had been drawing his supplies would be exhausted, and all his investment would be useless. He was also impressed that his business troubles were due to his departure from God, and this led him to much prayer.

One night in a dream a voice seemed to say to him, "Go deeper." It seemed to him to be the voice of God, and it led to an entire transformation of his life. As he entered upon a closer walk with God his heart was filled with new joy and power. But still the voice kept speaking to him so persistently that he began to think it had something to do with his business. And so one day he proposed to his foreman that they should abandon the old vein of coal, and sink a new shaft with a view of finding a deeper store. The foreman ridiculed the idea for all the indications were against it. But he insisted and at length a shaft was sunk, and after they had gone down a reasonable distance they struck, not a vein of coal, but lo, an immense vein of iron, and suddenly the bankrupt miner found himself a millionaire.

Is not this God's message to us today, "Go deeper?" If we have exhausted all the satisfaction and power there is in our present knowledge of truth, let us enter into the deep things of God, depths of wisdom.

Dwell deep, O my soul, deeper yet, hour by hour.
Dwell deep, deeper yet, in his fullness of power.

DOCTORS ADVISE OPERATIONS

Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Swarthmore, Penn. — "For fifteen years I suffered untold agony, and for one period of nearly two years I had hemorrhages and the doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I am all over the Change of Life and cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I recommend it to both old and young for female troubles." — Mrs. EMILY SUMMERSGILL, Swarthmore, Pa.

Baltimore, Md. — "My troubles began with the loss of a child, and I had hemorrhages for four months. The doctors said an operation was necessary, but I dreaded it and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has made me a well woman and I feel strong and do my own work." — Mrs. J. R. PICKING, 1260 Sargeant St., Baltimore, Md.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (co-ventual) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

NOSE STOPPED UP WITH CATARRH

It gets right at the root of the trouble, cleanses, heals and strengthens the raw, sore membranes, stops the nasty discharge so that you are not constantly blowing the nose and spitting. In a few minutes after applied you can just feel it doing its work of clearing the head, the pain and soreness are relieved, the breathing becomes natural and the stuffed up feeling is gone. This cleansing, healing, antiseptic Balm contains no mercury, cocaine or other harmful drugs. It is easy to apply, pleasant to use, and never fails to give relief, even in the worst cases.

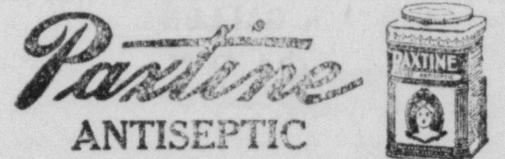

Never neglect a cold, and don't suffer the miseries of catarrh nor disgust your friends with your hawking, spitting and foul breath. Get a 50 cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist, and start the treatment at once. You will find that it will be the best investment you ever made.

For Women Who Care

Of course you use an antiseptic in your family and in the care of your own person, and you want the best.

Instead of what you have been using such as liquid or tablet antiseptics or peroxide, won't you please try Paxtine, a concentrated antiseptic powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

Paxtine is more economical, more cleansing, more germicidal and more healing than anything you ever used.

In the toilet—to cleanse and whiten the teeth, remove tartar and prevent decay. To disinfect the mouth, destroy disease germs, and purify the breath. To keep artificial teeth and bridgework clean and odorless. To remove nicotine from the teeth and purify the breath after smoking. To eradicate perspiration odors by sponge bathing.

As a medicinal agent for local treatment of feminine ills where pelvic catarrh, inflammation and ulceration exist, nothing equals hot douches of Paxtine. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. has been regularly advising their patients to use it because of its extraordinary cleansing, healing and germicidal power. For this purpose alone Paxtine is worth its weight in gold. Also for nasal catarrh, sore throat, inflamed eyes, cuts and wounds. All druggists, 25 and 50 cents a box. Trial box and testimony of 31 women free on request. THE PAXTINE TOILET CO., Boston, U.S.A.

The old clergyman, a little fuzzy in brain from his debut in beer, continued innocently to confirm the appearance of a detective by drifting aimlessly about. He was looking for his wife, but he kept glancing at the uneasy Fosdicks. He went to the door, opened it, saw Mrs. Wellington finishing a cigar, and retreated precipitately. Seeing Mrs. Temple wandering in the corridor, he motioned her to a chair near the Fosdicks and she sat by his side, wondering at his filmy eyes.

The Fosdicks, glancing uncomfortably at Dr. Temple, rose and selected other chairs further away. Then Roger Ashton sauntered in, his eyes searching for a proper companion through the tunnel.

He saw Mrs. Wellington returning from the platform, just tossing away her cigar and blowing out the last of its grateful vapor.

With an effort at sarcasm, he went to her and offered her one of his own cigars, smiling: "Have another."

She took it, looked it over, and parried his irony with a formula she had heard men use when they hate to refuse a gift-cigar: "Thanks. I'll smoke it after dinner, if you don't mind."

"Oh, I don't mind," he laughed, then bending closer he murmured: "They tell me we are coming to a tunnel, a nice, long, dark, dismal tunnel."

Mrs. Wellington would not take a dare. She felt herself already emancipated from Jimmie. So she answered Ashton's hint with a laughing challenge:

"How nice of the conductor to arrange it."

Ashton smacked his lips over the prospect.

And now the porter, having noted Ashton's impatience to reach the tunnel, thought to curry favor and a quarter by announcing its approach. He bustled in and made straight for Ashton just as the tunnel announced itself with a sudden swoop of gloom, a great increase of the train-noises and a far-off clang of the locomotive bell.

Out of the Egyptian darkness came the unmistakable sounds of osculation in various parts of the room. Doubtless, it was repeated in other parts of the train. There were numerous cooing sounds, too, but nobody spoke except Mrs. Temple, who was heard to murmur:

"Oh, Walter, dear, what makes your breath so funny!"

Next came a little yowl of pain in Mrs. Fosdick's voice, and then day-

SAID SHE WOULD FAINT

Mrs. Della Long Unable to Stand On Her Feet More Than a Few Minutes at a Time.

Pendergrass, Ga.—Mrs. Della Long, of this place, in a recent letter, says: "For five or six years, I suffered agonies with womanly troubles."

Often, I couldn't sit up more than a few minutes at a time, and if I stood on my feet long, I would faint.

I took Cardui, and it helped me immediately. Now, I can do my work all the time, and don't suffer like I did. Take Cardui when you feel ill in any way—weak, tired, miserable, or under the weather. Cardui is a strength-building tonic medicine for women.

It has been found to relieve pain and distress caused by womanly troubles, and is an excellent medicine to have on hand at all times.

Cardui acts on the womanly constitution, building up womanly strength, toning up the nerves, and regulating the womanly organs.

Its half century of success is due to merit. It has done good to thousands. Will you try it? It may be just what you need. Ask your druggist about Cardui. He will recommend it.

light flooded the car with a rush, as if time had made an instant leap from midnight to noon. There were interesting disclosures.

Mrs. Temple was caught with her arms round the doctor's neck, and she blushed like a spoony girl. Mrs. Fosdick was trying to disengage her hair from Mr. Fosdick's scarf-pin. Mrs. Whitcomb alone was deserted. Mr. Ashton was gazing devotion at Mrs. Wellington and trying to tell her with his eyes how velvet he had found her cheek.

But she was looking reproachfully at him from a chair, and saying, not without regret:

"I heard everybody kissing everybody, but I was cruelly neglected."

Ashton's eyes widened with unbelief, he heard a snicker at his elbow, and whirled to find the porter rubbing his black velvet cheek and writhing with pent-up laughter.

Mrs. Wellington glanced the same way, and a shriek of understanding burst from her. It sent the porter into a spasm of yah-yahs till he caught Ashton's eyes and saw murder in them. The porter fled to the platform and held the door fast, expecting to be lynched.

But Ashton dashed away in search of concealment and soap.

The porter remained on the platform for some time, planning to leap overboard and take his chances rather than fall into Ashton's hands, but at length, finding himself unpursued, he peered into the car and, seeing that Ashton had gone, he returned to his duties. He kept a close watch on Ashton, but on soberer thoughts Ashton had decided that the incident would best be consigned to silence and oblivion. But for all the rest of that day he kept rubbing his lips with his handkerchief.

The porter, noting that the train had swept into a granite gorge like an enormously magnified aisle in a made-up sleeping car, recognized the presence of Echo Canyon, and with it the entrance into Utah. He hastened to impart the tidings to Mr. Fosdick and held out his hand as he extended the information.

Fosdick could hardly believe that his twelve-hundred-mile exile was over.

"We're in Utah?" he exclaimed.

"Yassah," and the porter shoved his palm into view. Fosdick filled it with all his loose change, then whirled to his wife and cried:

"Edith! We are in Utah now! Embrace me!"

She flung herself into his arms with a gurgle of bliss. The other passengers gasped with amazement. This sort of thing was permissible enough in a tunnel, but in the full light of day!

Fosdick, noting the sensation he had created, waved his hand reassuringly and called across his wife's shoulder:

"Don't be alarmed, ladies and gentlemen. She's my wife!" He added in a whisper meant for her ear alone: "At least till we get to Nevada!"

Then she whispered something in his ear and they hurried from the car. They left behind them a bewildered crowd that eclipsed the wonder of the Mallories. That couple spoke to each other at least during the day time. Here was a married pair that did not speak at all for two days and two nights and then made a sudden and public rush to each other's arms!

Dr. Temple summed up the general feeling when he said:

"I don't believe in witches, but if I did, I'd believe that this train is bewitched."

Later he decided that Fosdick was a Mormon elder and that Mrs. Fosdick was probably a twelfth or thirteenth spouse he was smuggling in from the east. The theory was not entirely false, for Fosdick was one of the many victims of the crazy-quilt of American divorce codes, though he was the most unwilling of polygamists. And Dr. Temple gave up his theory in despair the next morning when he found the Fosdicks still on the train, and once more keeping aloof from each other.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Train Butcher.

Mallory was dragging out a miserable existence with a companion who was neither maid, wife, nor widow and to whom he was neither bachelor, husband, nor relic.

They were suffering brain-fag from their one topic of conversation, and heart-fag from rapture deferred. Marjorie had pretended to take a nap and Mallory had pretended that he would leave her for her own sake. Their contradictory chains were beginning to gall.

Mallory sat in the smoking room, and threw aside a half-finished cigar. Life was indeed nauseous when to bacco turned rank on his lips. He watched without interest the stupendous scenery whirling past the train; granite ravines, infernal grotesques of architecture and diablerie, the Giant's Teapot, the Devil's Slide, the Pulpit Rock, the Hanging Rock, splashes of mineral color, as if titanic paint pots had been spilled or flung against the cliffs, sudden hushes of green pine-worlds, dreary graveyards of sand and sagebrush, mountain streams in frothing panics.

His jaded soul could not respond to any of these thrillers, the dime-novels and melodramatic third-acts of nature. But with the arrival of a train-boy, who had got on at Evanston with a batch of Salt Lake City newspapers, he woke a little.

The other men came trooping round, like sheep at a herd-boy's whistle or chickens when a pan of grain is brought into the yard. The train "butcher" had a nasal sing-song, but his strain might have been the Pied Piper's tune emptying Hamelin of its grown-ups. The charms of flirtation, matrimonial bliss and feminine beauty were forgotten, and the males flocked to the delights of stock-market reports, political or racing or dramatic or sporting or criminal news. Even Ashton braved the eyes of his fellow men for the luxury of burying his nose in a fresh paper.

"Papers, gents? Yes? No?" the train butcher chanted. "Salt Lake papers, Ogden papers, all the latest papers, comic papers, magazines, periodicals."

"Here, boy," said Ashton, snapping his fingers, "what's the latest New York paper?"

"Last Saturday's."

"Six days old? I read that before I left New York. Well, give me that Salt Lake paper. It has yesterday's stock market, I suppose."

"Yes, sir," he passed over the sheet and made change, without abating his monody: "Papers, gents. Yes? No? Salt Lake pa—"

"Whash latesth from Chicago?" said Wellington.

"Monday's."

"I read that before—that breakfast began," laughed Little Jimmie. "Well, give me Salt Lake Bazzoo. It has baseball news, I s'pose."

"Yes, sir," the butcher answered, and his tone grew reverent as he said: "The Giants won. Mr. Mattyson was pitching. Papers, gents, all the latest papers, magazines, periodicals."

Wedgewood extended a languid hand: "What's the latest issue of the London Times?"

"Never heard of it."

Wedgewood almost fainted, and returned to his Baedeker of the United States.

Dr. Temple summoned the lad: "I don't suppose you have the Ypsilanti Eagle?"

The butcher regarded him with pity, and sniffed: "I carry newspapers, not poultry."

"Well, give me the—" he saw a pink weekly of rather picturesque appearance, and the adventure attracted him. "I'll take this—also the Outlook." He folded the pink within the green, and entered into a new and startling world—a sort of journalistic slumming tour.

"Give me any old thing," said Mallory, and flung open an Ogden Journal till he found the sporting page, where his eyes brightened. "By jove, a ten-inning game! Matthewson in the box!"

"Mattie is most intellectual pitcher in the world," said Little Jimmie, and then everybody disappeared behind paper ramparts, while the butcher lingered to explain to the porter the details of the great event.

About this time, Marjorie, tired of her pretence at slumber, strolled into the observation car, glancing into the men's room, where she saw nothing but newspapers. Then Mrs. Wellington saw her, and smiled: "Come in and make yourself at home."

"Thanks," said Marjorie, bashfully, "I was looking for my—"

"Husband?"

"My dog."

"How is he this morning?"

"My dog?"

"Your husband?"

"Oh, he's as well as could be expected."

"Where did you get that love of a waist?" Mrs. Wellington laughed.

"Mrs. Temple lent it to me. Isn't it sweet?"

"Exquisite! The latest Ypsilanti mode."

Marjorie, suffering almost more acutely from being badly frocked than from being duped in her matrimonial hopes, threw herself on Mrs. Wellington's mercy.

"I'm so unhappy in this. Couldn't you lend me or sell me something a little smarter?"

"I'd love to, my dear," said Mrs. Wellington, "but I left home on short notice myself. I shall need all my divorce trousseau in Reno. Otherwise

—I—but here's your husband. You two ought to have some place to spoon. I'll leave you this whole room."

And she swept out, nodding to Mallory, who had divined Marjorie's presence, and felt the need of being near her, though he also felt the need of finishing the story of the great ball game. Husbandlike, he felt that he was conferring sufficient courtesy in throwing a casual smile across the top of the paper.

Marjorie studied his motley garb, and her own, and groaned:

"We're a sweet looking pair, aren't we?"

"Mr. and Miss Fit," said Mallory, from behind the paper.

"Oh, Harry, has your love grown cold?" she pleaded.

"Marjorie, how can you think such a thing?" still from behind the paper.

"Well, Mrs. Wellington said we ought to have some place to spoon, and she went away and left us, and—there you stand—and—"

This pierced even the baseball news, and he threw his arms around her with glow of devotion.

She snuggled closer, and cooed: "Aren't we having a nice long engagement? We've traveled a million miles, and the preacher isn't in sight yet. What have you been reading—wedding announcements?"

"No—I was reading about the most wonderful exhibition. Mattie was in the box—and in perfect form."

"Mattie?" Marjorie gasped uneasily.

"Mattie!" he raved, "and in perfect form."

And now the hidden serpent of jealousy, which promised to enliven their future, lifted its head for the first time, and Mallory caught his first glimpse of an unsuspected member of their household. Marjorie demanded with an ominous chill:

"And who's Mattie? Some former sweetheart of yours?"

"My dear," laughed Mallory.

But Marjorie was up and away, with apt temper: "So Mattie was in the box, was she? What is it to you, where she sits? You dare to read about her and rave over her perfect form, while you neglect your wife—or your—oh, what am I, anyway?"

Mallory stared at her in amazement. He was beginning to learn what ignorant heathen women are concerning so many of the gods and demigods of mankind. Then, with a tenderness he might not always show, he threw the paper down and took her in his arms: "You poor child. Mattie is a man—a pitcher—and you're the only woman I ever loved—and you are liable to be my wife any minute."

The explanation was sufficient, and she crawled into the shelter of his arm with little noises that served for apology, forgiveness and reconciliation. Then he made the mistake of mentioning the sickening topic of deferred hope:

"A minister's sure to get on at the next stop—or the next."

Marjorie's nerves were frayed by too much enduring, and it took only a word to set them jangling: "If you say minister to me again, I'll scream." Then she tried to control herself with a polite: "Where is the next stop?"

"Ogden."

"Where's that? On the map?"

"Well, it's in Utah."

"Utah!" she groaned. "They marry by wholesale there, and we can't even get a sample."

Seeking A Sensation

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

Carruthers jammed his note book into his pocket; lit his big calabash pipe, took up his walking stick and soft hat and whistled to his dog, Mike. A moment later he was swinging off across the fields surrounding the aviation club.

Carruthers could not tell the dog that he had written a story in which an airship figured and that his knowledge of bird men and their craft was lamentably meager.

"We will stroll about the fields, Mikey, in the hope that some conqueror of the air will chance to pass over our ignorant heads. In that way we may glean a sufficient atmosphere to make our story real."

Half an hour later Carruthers was lying full length in the long grass. Mike, more or less disgusted that the walk had turned out as it usually did, nosed about for venturesome snakes and moles.

Suddenly he pricked up his ears. A buzzing as of many bees disturbed the silence. The noise grew louder, nearer, Mike circled about like mad until he caught sight of the great flying thing that was approaching nearer and nearer.

Mike, completely disgusted at his master's lack of enthusiasm, put his nose to the sky and yelped frantically at the flying monster.

His efforts were successful. Carruthers awoke from his dreaming and sat bolt upright.

Steady and smooth as a bark on a calm sea the bi-plane sailed majestically through the air.

"By Jove, Mike!" Carruthers exclaimed in his enthusiasm, "I would give the whole of my last cheque for the sensation of gliding through space like that!"

As if in direct answer to his desire a missile came hurtling down from the airship.

Carruthers picked up the missile and read:

"Whoever finds this note of mine, Can fly with me at any time.

Call at hangar number nine.

"N. QUILLER."

We will have to wait until tomorrow for our sensation," he told Mike as they made their way back to the lonely bungalow on the hill.

But the next day rain came down in torrents and the wind blew. Carruthers had a vague notion that bird men did not make flights in rainy weather.

The following day he and Mike set out for the aviation grounds.

Carruthers slackened his pace but when he drew near to the hangar that bore the name of N. Quiller.

Within, voices were heard and outside lay the great bi-plane.

Carruthers knocked at the green door and Mike barked imperiously.

A small man came from within and through the smoky goggles of his leather bonnet looked at the author.

With a hesitating gesture Carruthers held out the square of lead with its bit of paper.

"I am looking for a man by the name of N. Quiller—the man who dropped this—"

A silvery laugh came from behind the goggles. Carruthers started back, "So you picked up my note."

The laugh came again and Carruthers found himself making music of it. "I hoped it would be found and if you are ready we will go up immediately."

Carruthers had drawn away in his embarrassment. "I—I—had not expected to find a—lady," he said hesitatingly and twirling his cap in a vague, undecided manner.

The voice from behind the goggles was slightly mocking. "You are not afraid, are you?"

"I might be if I could see your face," Carruthers told her with his whimsical smile.

Natalia Quiller colored swiftly beneath the leather bonnet. "Then you can not see my face until we reach terra firma," she cried laughingly.

"Come—I will take you up as my note promised."

"Don't you want to know the name of your passenger in case—"

"In case we come down quicker than we expect?" she laughed. "Yes," she said with sudden softness, "yes—I would like to know your name."

"John Carruthers—and that is my dog, Mike."

"Is my passenger then, the John Carruthers of short story fame?"

"I was seeking sensations for a story when your missive nearly took my ear off," the author said.

"I hope you find—sensations," Natalia said with a wicked light in the eyes behind the goggles. And Carruthers found more than a story—he found a wife in the air.

Tactful Request.

Dobbleigh was a confirmed borrower, and, what was worse, he seldom returned the borrowed articles. He had held on to Whibley's umbrella, for instance, for nearly a year.

"And I'm blest if I know how I am ever going to get it back," said Whibley.

"Easy," said Hickenlooper. "Call a messenger and send Dobbleigh this note."

And he scribbled off the following: "Dear Dobbleigh: If you can spare it I'd like to borrow that umbrella of mine for a couple of days. Can you oblige me?"—Harper's Weekly.

SHIP CATTLE SOON

Many Train Loads Will Be Sent From Medora This Spring.

The stock men near Medora are making arrangements to ship their cattle soon. Medora has become quite a shipping point for cattle during the past few years as many of the farmers are giving considerable attention to stock raising. Many cars were loaded at that town last spring and sent to Chicago, St. Louis and the eastern markets.

Some of the cattle which have been shipped from Medora were among the best that were received by the packers, and consequently the stock is in demand. The country in the vicinity of Medora is well suited for grazing cattle and stock, and a larger number will be sent out this year than ever before.

M. E. Revival.

The meeting at the Methodist church last night was one of the best of the present series.

One young man at the altar and others seemed to be greatly moved. We are looking for greater things tonight.

God is moving this way. The Bible study, at 3 o'clock each afternoon is a rich service. Do not miss it. Tonight the service will begin at 7:30 with praise and prayer at 8. Mr. Nichols will preach. Come and help.

The choral society of the Medora schools will give a social tonight in the school house.

Word was received here this morning that J. P. Fagan of Madison was slightly improved today.

William Carr, the aged father of commissioner Samuel Carr of Medora is seriously ill at his home.

Edward Patrick left this morning for Marietta, O. where he has a position with the Marietta Chair Company, after a short vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Patrick.

A woman whose reputation is rather shady was given notice by the police yesterday that there was no place in Seymour for her and she was given until this evening to leave the city.

Miss Anna Adams, collector for the Mutual Telephone Company, returned home last evening from Salem where she has spent a week. Miss Adams is recovering from her recent illness.

The following veterans and soldiers' widows in this county have recently been granted an increase in pension: Marion M. McCoy, Crothersville, $15; Elizabeth Stoddill, Freetown, $12.

Mrs. W. W. Wingard of Minneapolis, Minn., who is here visiting her mother, Mrs. Mary Greer, went to Indianapolis this morning to see her sister, Mrs. Ernest McHaffie who is in the hospital there.

Orville Goen, who was accidentally shot in the leg Monday afternoon is recovering from the effects of the wound. The police have been unable to find who fired the shot although a number of boys in the west part of the city have been in the habit of firing their rifles on the streets.

Because of the death of Tilghmar A. Wallace, whose brother-in-law, T. J. Brooks, is one of the attorneys in the case of Dodson against McMillan & Son, set for trial in circuit court today, the case was continued this morning. Judge Shea, who came over from Seymour this morning for court, went to Bloomington this forenoon to spend the day. Miss Mabel Gray, the court stenographer, accompanied him. They will return this evening.—Bedford Democrat.

The farmers in this county find that as a result of unfavorable weather the clover pasture will be very short and are interested in knowing how to meet the want that will be occasioned by this shortage. Purdue University has issued a bulletin advising the sowing of rape for hog pasture, and soy bean, cow peas and Canadian field peas are also recommended. The bulletin gives instructions for the raising of these crops.

There are quite a number of French measles reported in the city at this time. The people who are afflicted with them have been quarantined, but are suffering no special inconvenience except in being kept away from their friends. In the majority of the cases the measles have appeared as a rash, but are not accompanied by a noticeable change of temperature or sore throat which are common with the regular measles.

ANOTHER INVASION OF CHICAGO SPORTS

Horse Racing to Be Revived On Indiana Soil.

Laporte, Ind., April 23.—The announcement of Ben R. Hyman, the Chicago track promoter, and others associated with him, that Chicago is scheduled to have ninety days of racing, starting June 15, has created considerable interest as well as some uneasiness here. There will be two tracks erected in Indiana one in Porter county and one in Lake county. The cost of the courses will be $200,000. Six meetings of fifteen days each will be run. There will be no attempt at continuous racing. The season will close Oct. 15.

Hyman bases his hope for the turf revival on the law which permits fifteen-day meetings in Indiana. He points out that there is no law in the Hoosier state which holds track owners responsible for betting on their courses. It was the owners' liability clause in the New York anti-gambling law which dealt racing in Gotham its death blow.

While pointing out that the founders will neither indulge in any gambling nor sell any concessions, the latest turf revival opines that any spectator of standing will have little trouble making an oral bet.

"People may laugh at my scheme but I am certain that there will be racing in Indiana this year," says Hyman. "We have plenty of backing. The ground is picked for the courses, and we are satisfied that there will be no interference, as we will not be violating any Indiana law."
